CTM-Vocational Training Hub was named after Connie Thrash McGoodwin, M.Ed. and modelled after Dale Rogers Training Center, Inc. (DRTC), in Oklahoma City, U.S.A. It gave us; stated Lovetie Major, M.Ed., Founder & CEO of MHA, a great honor and pride to name our vocational training hub after a trailblazer who has spent her entire career paving the way and altering the minds of society and eventually proven the fact that, everyone can be productive if given a chance.

What motivates McGoodwin? “As trite as it sounds, I like knowing I’ve made a positive difference in the lives of people with disabilities and their families” says McGoodwin, Executive Director (DRTC). “I like being the good guy and love seeing how good management, common sense and the ability to take a calculated risk helps us at Dale Rogers Training Center, Inc., Oklahoma City; to be successful in win/win business endeavors. I like thinking outside the box and watching the folks we serve earning wages and doing things no one ever thought they could. The Board of Directors and the professional staff have a great partnership that keeps us on the same page and promotes success.”

McGoodwin spent two years in New South Wales, Australia, teaching and lecturing; and taught in Brooklyn, New York. In addition to her master’s degree, she has hours towards an MBA at Oklahoma City University and is certified in all areas of disabilities. Her husband Jim, an attorney, is retired from Office of State Finance. Her son Colin an endowed microbiologist. The whole McGoodwin family are Thunder Fans, but they are a house divided when it comes to OU versus OSU football.
